Account of the Council of Ministers of 30 April 2003

The Minister of the Interior, internal security and local freedoms presented a Draft law on immigration control and residence of foreigners in France.

This project is based on the need to strengthen our legislation in the fight against illegal immigration. He includes a number of measures designed to facilitate and improve the reception and integration of foreigners by Regular situation on French territory. It proposes and a reform of the legislation relating to measures administrative expulsion and judicial penalties of exclusion from French territory.

1. As regards the fight against the and the control of migratory flows, The text seeks to fill the gaps in the legislation on immigration. To this end, he creates a fingerprint file digital information of visa applicants, which will make it possible to identify foreigners who, having entered our territory legally, remained there clandestinely. Similarly, the draft establishes a check of the reception certificates. The mayor may refuse to validate the certificate of reception when previous applications will reveal an attempt at fraud or when the conditions of housing by the Migration Agency will show that normal hosting conditions are not met.

Secondly, the bill proposes provisions to combat against "sham" or forced marriages and acknowledgments of paternity of convenience. Thus, the cohabitation period necessary for the issuance of the residence card by virtue of marriage to a French national will be increased from one to two years. Similarly, the status of parent of a French child will not give access to the residence card that after two years of exercising parental authority and participation in the child's maintenance costs. The law also establishes an offence of organization or participation in a marriage of convenience. It provides for other than the civil registrars will have to check the situation with regard to the right of residence of persons who wish to get married in France. In the event of an illegal stay, the prefect will be informed of this situation and the mayor may refer the matter to the prosecutor for the purpose of investigating the real intentions of the future spouses. The celebration of the marriage for a period of 75 days. Within this period, the public prosecutor may oppose it.

Thirdly, the bill strengthens the arsenal of Sanctions against smugglers and transporters.

Finally, it proposes a reform of detention prior to the forced execution of removal measures. After a First detention period decided by the Authority for a period of 48 hours, the extension of the detention must be authorised by the judge of liberty and detention for a period of 15 days, renewable once if the alien is an obstacle to his removal. If the extension has not occurred within 17 days (48 hours plus 15 days) because of problems external to the behaviour of the foreigner, the extension will be for a maximum of nine days. This duration maximum retention, which will therefore vary from 26 to 32 days, will be approximately the minimum retention periods applicable in the States of European Union and it will be a step forward significant compared to the current 12-day time frame, which is incompatible with the usual time for issuing passes or the organization of group flights between States of the European Union.

2. As regards the right of residence and the consideration of integration objectives, The bill makes the issuance of the residence card conditional to an integration criterion, with a view to ensuring integration foreigners legally residing in France and distinguish between the right of residence and the status under which the foreigner stays in the territory: after an initial period for a minimum of five years under cover of a residence permit renewable period of one year, foreigners who have integrated into French society will be able to claim the benefit of a ten-year residence permit which confers greater security of stay. This integration condition will be assessed taking into account various criteria, such as knowledge of the French language, vocational training or participation in local and associative life. It will constitute a major incentive to monitor the reception and integration contract which will be implemented gradually and generalized to as of January 1, 2005. The final stage of integration the acquisition of nationality will remain.

The bill also removes the requirement for to have a residence permit.

3. The draft finally proposes a balanced reform legislation on evictions and prohibitions of French territory. When they concern foreigners who have made their lives in France, these measures are largely unenforceable and lead to situations of clandestinity and disintegration contrary to the objective they pursue. The bill does not remove expulsions and the additional penalty of banning territory, which are useful in keeping offenders away from have no connection with French territory.

On the other hand, it establishes four categories of foreigners who will benefit from almost absolute protection against expulsion and Exclusion from French territory: foreigners born in France or arrived before the age of 13; foreigners legally resident in France for 20 years; foreigners legally residing in France for 10 years and married for three years to a French national or a foreign national who has spent his or her entire childhood in France; and foreigners legally residing in France for ten years and parents of French children. The project intends to prevent the situation where the expulsion and exclusion from French territory constitute a banishment and the one in which they lead to the break-up of stable French families.

Three exceptions are provided: terrorism, fundamental interests of the State and the provocation to the racial hatred.

For foreigners whose ties to France are not of such density that they would warrant protection measures are provided: existence imperatively necessary for the security of the State or the Public Safety for that expulsion may be ordered, possibility of postponement of eviction, social investigation mandatory before any prohibition is imposed territorial judicial system, possibility of benefiting from measures sentence adjustment despite the existence of a inadmissibility, systematic review every five years of deportation measures.
